June Highlights

6-9 June

24th European Biomass Conference and Exhibition

The EUBCE was the event in which the members of the bioenergy community could get a broad picture of the situation and trends emerging in today's market. The Conference provided a high-level scientific programme and parallel events which attracted participants from a wide-ranging background: researchers, engineers, technologists, standards organisations, financial institutions, policy makers and decision makers. This event was supported by European and international organizations. The Technical Programme was coordinated by the JRC. The JRC was also present at the exhibition.

6-9 June	European Code of Conduct Awards ceremony
The annual Datacentres Code of Conduct Awards was delivered at the Datacloud Europe 2016 Congress and Exhibition in Monaco. The European Code of Conduct Awards were created in response to the increasing energy consumption in data centres and the need to reduce the related environmental, economic and energy supply security impacts. The aim was to inform and stimulate data centre operators and owners to reduce their energy consumption in a cost effective way. The JRC was also present at the exhibition.
14 June	IP Exchange and Finance: a contribution to innovation
Many Intellectual Property platforms have been created with various degrees of success but no widely recognised institution exists that can help owners wanting to sell or license their Intellectual Property or support buyers in identifying IP that they may be interested in purchasing. This state of affairs perpetuates a situation in the Intellectual Property market in which costs are high and deals are made only following extensive negotiation (often on the basis of non-transparent price structures). This creates a challenging environment for corporates that can only sell Intellectual Property assets slowly and at high costs, for universities that struggle to commercialise their discoveries, for high-tech start-ups that have to recur to risky forms of financing or give away equity too quickly and for investors that find it hard to understand and value intangible assets that can, today, make up a significant portion of a company's value. The proposed workshop considered the challenges and opportunities presented by Intellectual Property trading and Intellectual Property based finance. It hosted a variety of keynote speakers with experience in patent, copyright and IP markets in general; it brought together a number of representatives of Intellectual Property trading and finance initiatives and was concluded with an analysis of possibilities for EU action. The objective was to better understand the domain of Intellectual Property exchange and finance in Europe. Possible options for action at the EU level were discussed.
14-16 June	Google Earth Engine User Summit 2016
The Google Earth Engine (GEE) User Summit 2016 brought together researchers and educators in GIS and remote sensing technologies that have been using Google Earth Engine, or were interested in learning how to use Google Earth Engine for planetary-scale cloud-based geospatial analysis. The summit included: (i) three days of training on Google Earth Engine (GEE) to learn new tools for mapping and monitoring forest deforestation and degradation, and profile the scripts developed in Roadless with the support of the GEE team and (ii) Plenary presentations of the new applications from other people working with the same tools and/or on similar topics.
15 June	Achieving the Sustainable Development Goals by 2030
How do young people see themselves as agents of change? Selected for their diverse expertise and leadership qualities, the Young Leaders will engage you to improve and challenge their visions for achieving the Sustainable Development Goals by 2030. During the European Development Days (EDD) 2016, the EU Policy Lab organised a session "Achieving the Sustainable Development Goals by 2030" and showcased the Young Leaders' grassroots and wide-ranging experience, and explored opportunities and challenges emerging from major future trends. In their pursuit to find creative, fresh and innovative solutions, a systems approach was used to explore cross-cutting issues within the themes of people, planet, prosperity, peace and partnership. The Young Leaders worked in four parallel interactive groups, shaped their proposals into novel key messages designed to engage today's development community. The event was facilitated by Xavier Troussard, Head of Unit, Foresight and Behavioural Insight, Joint Research Centre, European Commission, the EU Policy Lab, and the EDD2016 Young Leaders
16 June	Smart Specialisation in Energy: How are Europe's regions implementing their priorities?
Energy is indeed the most popular priority selected in smart specialisation strategies across Europe, with over 2/3 of all EU regions choosing at least one energy-related priority. From the perspective of Cohesion Policy, effective uptake of funds related to innovation in energy will be a crucial element of this pillar, as well as the actual implementation of the smart specialisation strategies. The purpose of this event was to showcase specific advancements of Smart Specialisation in the area of energy. Panellists and participants were kindly invited to discuss the following topics: •What are the main challenges for regions, when regions are passing from design to implementation of S3 energy priorities •How collaborative frameworks are supporting a better implementation of S3 energy priorities. Target group: stakeholders and practitioners of Smart Specialisation Strategies having included energy-related priorities at national and regional level.

Knowledge Centre for Migration and Demography Launch

On the timely occasion of World Refugee Day, this event brought together policy makers, analysts and researchers from the European Commission, other EU institutions, European and international organisations, think tanks and academia to launch the European Commission's Knowledge Centre on Migration and Demography. The event underlined scope and aims of the Knowledge Centre to provide tangible, internally validated responses to these needs: on the one hand centralising, putting in context and making comparable the relevant knowledge while on the other distilling, qualifying and tailoring it to serve the different EU policies with the most appropriate information. In doing this, the knowledge centre contributes to identify existing knowledge gaps and areas requiring more focused research and studies.

21 June

STS Contro-Corrente Seminar: DataBust, Dissecting Big Data Practices and Imaginaries

Across both public and private domains, Big Data continues to generate great interest. Glorified by some and demonized by others, modern data analytics have been touted as a "revolution that will transform how we live, work, and think" (Mayer-Schönberger and Cukier 2013). But how exactly do Big Data processes participate in shaping society and "making up people" (Hacking 1999)? This presentation argued that in order to understand Big Data and its societal consequences, a combination of ethical and epistemological analysis is needed as certain ethical implications – e.g., related to issues of anonymity and privacy – can only be properly assessed if the underlying epistemic practices – e.g., new ways of re-identification and de-anonymization – are recognized and taken into account. An appreciation of the epistemic properties of Big Data methodologies as novel and potentially problematic forms of computational knowledge production thus represents a first key concern. In addition, the presentation considered the significance of Big Data for public policy in a twofold manner: First, it examines the increased emphasis on predictive analytics as a rationale and justification for political action and decision making; second, it identifies new requirements and challenges in the governance of Big Data, addressing issues such as the general complexity and speed of development (a), the profound lack of technical skills and competencies for improved regulation (b), as well as insufficient access to data in both the government sector and academia (c). The presentation concluded with some considerations on how a responsible governance of Big Data may deal with these challenges; a subsequent discussion part dealt with "political imaginaries" (Ezrahi 2015) of Big Data in recent EC communications, press releases, and speeches.

21-24 June

32nd European Photovoltaic Solar Energy Conference (EUPVSEC)

EU PVSEC is one of the premiere PV conferences globally, attracting over 1000 papers and about 3000 participants each year. This year's event was held in Munich (Germany) from the 21st to the 24th of June. The European Commission established the first of these conferences in 1981 (held at Stresa, Italy). Since 1996 the JRC supports the Conference by providing the scientific programme coordination.

The ROMANIA National Event is co-organised by JRC's S3 Platform - S2E project and the Romanian Ministry of National Education and Scientific Research

28 June

Virtual Currencies: combating fraud and counterfeiting of non-cash means of payments

The JRC organised in collaboration with the Directorate-General for Migration and Home Affairs and EUROPOL, a workshop about Virtual Currencies in the context of fight against fraud and counterfeiting of non-cash means of payments. This workshop aimed at providing a scientific support to the forthcoming revision of the 2001 Council Decision on combating fraud and counterfeiting of non-cash means of payment. With the involvement of stakeholders from academia, industry and EU law enforcement, the objective of the workshop was to analyse, following a threat driven approach, the emerging cases of fraud and counterfeiting related to Virtual Currencies and to evaluate their possible inclusion in the revision of the 2001 decision in order to enable an effective and solid prosecution of such new type of criminal activities.
